Open Space is known as the ongoing coffee break. Participants will conduct the whole conference in a self-organized manner. It is driven by participants' passion and responsibility. There is no pre-fixed agenda determined by other “authorities”. The agenda of the meeting is made by the participants' issues within the framework of the time, space and topic of our conference. Each issue is a reason for a small break-out session led by participants themselves. Self-organized work creates access to the own and other's resources. At the same time it generates a sense of community and drive for action and implementation of new ideas.
